TAKING A LOOK AROUND ZAGREB

Trg Bana Jelačića is where everyone meets. You should recognize it easily thanks to the statue of Jelačić himself. But this noted army general has not always been around – his statue was actually removed in 1947, and then brought back over 40 years later. From there, you can easily start exploring the city, which makes it a great starting point of your trip.

You can head up to the upper town. Back then, at the beginning of the second millennium it used to be divided into two settlements: Kaptol which was the seat of a bishop and Gradec fortified town of merchants. The first written record of the Kaptol comes from the 17th century and tells us that King Ladislav of Hungary made the town the seat of a bishop in 1094. Kaptol is still today the seat of a bishop and home of the city cathedral which is still in renovation since it was badly damaged during the earthquake that hit Zagreb in 2022.

Because of Zagreb's long history, there is much to see in the streets of the upper town. Go and check out our cathedral, or the Church of St. Marko with its colorful toproof. Visit "Kamenita vrata" and light a candle for your dearest. Finally, don't miss Dolac, the city market which is not only the biggest food market in the city, but a place where locals go just to get out of their houses and walk around.

If you are not into old buildings and churches and you want some peace and quietness, check out Zrinjevac. It forms part of the so-called Green Horseshoe, a U-shaped combination of lively squares and restful parks.

Another brilliant option in case you wonder what to do in Zagreb – specially since you will be passing by it every day on your way to conference venue – is to visit one of the most beautiful city forest parks in Europe: Maksimir. And since you are already there, you can visit the city zoo situated in this beautiful quiet oasis.

And last but not least: Jarun. For many years now, it has been a perfect place for relaxation by day and party by night. Besides that, every June it hosts the popular INmusic festival, very worthwhile to check it out.

Limited availability, please make your reservation before March 15th

There will be day trip organised for those who are interested in visiting one of the most beautiful scenes in Croatia.

Plitvice Lakes National Park, Croatia's largest national park covering almost 30,000 hectares, is situated in the lower elevations of the Dinarides in the central part of the country. Within a beautiful karst landscape dominated by a mix of forests and meadows, the magnificent Plitvice lake system stands out, fascinating scientists and visitors alike.

Embedded in a mosaic of forests and meadows, Plitvice Lakes National Park conserves a strikingly beautiful and intact series of lakes formed by natural tufa barriers. The tufa barriers are the result of longstanding and ongoing interaction between water, air, sediments (geological foundation) and organisms. The extension of the dynamic, constantly evolving lake system, the proportion of the tufa barriers, jointly with the numerous dynamic waterfalls and clear water courses and the expression of colours, make Plitvice Lakes National Park an aesthetically outstanding natural spectacle of global importance.

The tour will start from Zagreb at 8.00 h, and return is planned for 20.00 h.

Duration: 12 h

Includes: comfortable tourist bus transfer, a guided tour through the National park, lunch
