Welcome to the ERNOP Safe Spaces for Philanthropy 2023

What are 'Safe Spaces'? Safe spaces are intended to be free of bias, conflict, criticism, or potentially threatening actions, ideas, or conversations where people can speak freely, and are being treated with openness and respect, without losing individual integrity. Universities are by definition places that should function as safe spaces. Integrating them into ERNOP brings a valuable format to be part of our association, and to provide a means to deepen our understanding of the topic we all care about: philanthropy.

This event, taking place the day before the ERNOP Research conference, will host and facilitate in-depth exchanges between academia and philanthropy professionals. The event will connect academics with philanthropy practitioners, foster learning from academia and practitioners and create safe spaces in which participants address themes that include a high level of trust. Furthermore, the output of this event will be looped back into research on related topics and an edited volume of 'Dialogues' that will be published by the Journal of Philanthropy and Marketing. By collaborating with Philanthropy Europe Association (Philea), we aim to make these Safe Spaces relevant for all working in, with and for philanthropy in Europe. We are grateful for their assistance in developing the format and for kick-starting the conversations through hosting the icebreaker.

By creating safe spaces for philanthropy, this initiative creates open exchanges and potentially will contribute to the creation of new partnerships between academics and professionals working in and for philanthropy. For practitioners it will create an opportunity for peer learning and exchange on topics that are essential to the functioning of philanthropic organisations but often create friction and frustration. Also practitioners are provided with academic reflections to the topics that are on the table – it gives them a way to better understand the processes and possibilities to overcome these frictions, stay on top of the most recent research, and connect their daily practice and strategic thinking with research evidence. For academics it provides an opportunity to engage with an in-depth conversation on issues that are of importance to professionals working in the philanthropy sector and to integrate their feedback into their work.

The conversations will provide a platform to share knowledge and raise new avenues for innovative research and collaborations.

Trust is essential for Safe Spaces: All joining this event have formally agreed on the Chatham House Rule: participants are free to use the information received, but neither the identity nor the affiliation of the speaker(s), nor that of any other participant, may be revealed.

I wish you an inspirational afternoon and lasting relationships.

Dialogues

The Journal of Philanthropy and Marketing will publish a special issue of 5 open access 'Dialogue Papers' that include showcases of forward-thinking 'central pillar' articles and reflections from the practitioners. The 'Dialogue Papers' will be written by academics and practitioners that moderate a safe space. An editorial committee of representatives from ERNOP, Philea and JPM will facilitate the publication process.

The primary aim of the Dialogues special issues is to stimulate discussion and debate around a trending theme pertinent (primarily) to the third sector and philanthropy-based activities. The overarching aspiration is to revolutionise current thinking and praxis within the fields of philanthropy to help develop philanthropic practice, set an agenda for future avenues of research, and publish ideas through a unique format of open peer commentary.

The 'ERNOP Safe Spaces for Philanthropy' Dialogues special issue will showcase five forward-thinking 'central pillar' articles related to impact, diversity, inclusion, empowerment, advocacy and leadership in philanthropy and , alongside this, present a dialogue around these themes contributed by academics, practitioners and/or policymakers.

Dialogues aim to stimulate discussion around trending themes within the discipline of philanthropy through 'central pillar' articles and 'commentaries'. Central pillar articles can have practice-based, philosophical, methodological, or pedagogic foundations and will be written primarily by experts with academic backgrounds.

In turn, the respondents to the central pillar article (commentators) will (respectfully) offer their critical reflections, highlighting lines of agreement, outlining points of discord, and diagnosing potential means to reconcile any divergent views. Commentaries can be written by anyone with expertise related to a specific theme. Commentaries will be written in the first place by the participants of the ERNOP Safe Spaces (under Chatnam House rules) but can also be written by others.

Every session will start with an introduction on the related topic – what do we know? How does this apply to philanthropy? Moderators will share (im)possibilities and achievements in dealing with the topic, struggles and pitfalls. Together they will invite participants to share their experiences and possible ways to overcome challenges. Academic contributions and moderators come from ERNOP members, and contributions from practitioners from representatives of the broad spectrum of philanthropy.

Safe Spaces

Impact – (im)possibilities, managing internal and external expectations

Moderated by Reinhard Millner (WU Vienna) with Kate Sullivan (Generali Foundation)

Impact is on the agenda for years but still feeds debates among academics and puzzles many working in philanthropy. Discussions about (lack of) measurement tools and implications for (strategic) decision-making and from theories of change to unintended effects and attribution of implemented projects often lead to frustration and frozen organisations. What really matters in impact measurement? Can we move beyond the 'definition' and engage in trust-based approaches and connect evidence to strategy?

Diversity & Inclusion

Moderated by Laetitia Gill (Geneva Centre for Philanthropy) with Maja Spanu (Fondation de France)

What is the role of philanthropy in the promotion of diversity, whether internally and externally? Should it be a priority for philanthropic organizations, and if so why and how? What is their scope for action on this topic? Do foundations, staff and board members, carry a special responsibility towards societies in the promotion of diversity and other key concepts and practices that may participate to the constitution of more inclusive and equal societies? Do join us to discuss together these essential yet complex issues in our safe space on diversity, equity and inclusion. Everyone's welcome!

Engaging with stakeholders and empowering communities

Moderated by Janis Petzinger (University of St Andrews), Tobias Jung (University of St Andrews) and Dennis Arends (Porticus)

Given the size of philanthropy, it seems obvious to collaborate with other organisations to be effective as possible, pool resources, have a stronger voice and learn. Perhaps even more importantly, people and organisations that work directly with the target audience know best about their needs and effective interventions. And what about the final beneficiaries themselves? Yet too often, collaborations do not move beyond ad hoc informal relationships and project-based cooperation. What conditions are required for truly integrated collaboration to achieve a more significant impact? To what extent can communities of practice be developed, sustained and empowered? Or should we also stick to a top-down approach?

Advocacy by and for philanthropy

Moderated by Theo Schuyt (VU Amsterdam) with Volker Then (Fondazione AIS) and Hanna Surmatz (Philea)

For a long time, foundations in Europe have been working in relative silence. However, external and internal developments make philanthropy step up a stage and have the spotlights on. Meanwhile, the operating space for (international) philanthropy seems constantly under review. Does philanthropy have to worry about these developments, and can something be done? Is there a need for philanthropy to become involved in philanthropy advocacy to be able to maintain its voice and to engage in political activities? What lessons can be learned from becoming more active in policy-making? Or should philanthropy not be involved in politics as this will counter back?

Philanthropic and voluntary leadership

Moderated by Georg von Schnurbein (University of Basel) with Sufina Ahmad (John Ellerman Foundation)

Values drive our behaviour. Within philanthropic organisations, it would make sense that leaders' values resemble the organisation's driving values. Or are leaders within these organisations no different than their commercial or public counterparts? What are the values of leaders and what would be the use of these values for management of staff? Does it help or provide hindrance? And what role for board members?

15.45-16.15 Coffee break

16.15-17.15 Reflections and Knowledge harvesting by moderators

Based on the conversations in the safe spacious session moderators engage in a conversation with Rita Kottasz on key take aways and learnings with a focus on implications for theory and practice.

About the European Research Network On Philanthropy

The European Research Network on Philanthropy (ERNOP) is an association that was founded in January 2008 by collaborating philanthropy researchers in Europe to advance, coordinate and promote philanthropy research in Europe. Currently, around 250 members from 25 European countries have joined ERNOP. ERNOP is also open to non-European philanthropy researchers and practitioners.

ERNOP members study philanthropy, which is understood as private, mainly voluntary, contributions to public causes. However, we acknowledge that philanthropy has different meanings across Europe because of the large variations in the historical, social and legal background of philanthropy. ERNOP perceives all these different perspectives as being a strength, and aims to include them all in the study of philanthropy. ERNOP members actively publish their research in a wide range of mono- and interdisciplinary scientific journals, from economic journals to marketing, social policy and historical journals.

In order to further advance philanthropic research in Europe, ERNOP members from different countries and scientific disciplines have collaborated on numerous research projects and grant proposals, each bringing their own unique qualities and perspectives to the projects. New members are cordially invited to join collaborative proposals.

At the biennial ERNOP conference, researchers studying philanthropy present their state-of-art research, exchange ideas and meet colleagues and practitioners. The conference aims to contribute to a European philanthropy researcher identity. ERNOP is proud that this conference is considered to be the leading conference on European philanthropy research. We are pleased that ERNOP members represent European philanthropy research in other international conferences as ISTR and ARNOVA, and are part of the editorial board of major journals as NVSQ, Voluntas, JPM and VSR.

ERNOP represents the study of philanthropy in Europe in discussions among European policymakers in the public and philanthropy sector and has developed warm working relationships with European professional associations as Philea, EVPA, EFA and CEV. As research community we want to contribute to society. Every year, members of ERNOP publish their work in a broad range of academic journals and present their work on conferences. ERNOP members make their work available for all working in, with and for philanthropy through the ERNOP Science and Society Series and through the ERNOP Research Notes.
